PENROSE FORCES WIN AT TUESDAY'S PRIMARIES

Snyder Victor Over Ambler for Auditor General.

SCOTT WINNER BY 575

Defeats Gramley for Nomination for Assembley—Swoope and Gaffney Elected Natjonal Delegates—Palmer Defeats Liebel.

Tuesday's primaries in the State resulted in a triumph for the Penrose candidates for nomination for State offices and a division between the Penrose and the Brumbaugh forces in the election of delegates-at-large and district delegates to the Republican national convention. Charles A. Snyder was nominated for Auditor General over Charles A. Ambler, the latter being the Governor's candidate. Harmon Kephart was nominated for State Treasurer over J. V. Clark, the latter having the support of only a part of the Brumbaugh combination. Senator Penrose captured a large majority of the members of the Republican State Committee, insuring his election as Pennsylvania's representative in the Republican National Committee. On the Democratic side the Palmer, or reorganization, element won out all over the State, Palmer being re-elected national committeeman over Liebel by a decisive majority.

Just how many uninstructed and instructed Republican national delegates have been elected will not be known until more complete returns are at hand. The Penrose, or uninstructed, delegates won generally over the State. The Brumbaugh, or instructed, delegates polled their heaviest vote in Philadelphia, where the Vares have apparently captured control of the Republican City Committee. Senators Penrose and Oliver are among the delegates-at-large elected, and early returns indicate that Governor Brumbaugh also is elected a delegate-at-large.

The Penrose ticket of national delegates-at-large won out in Centre County. The high man in the Penrose group had 1263 votes, as compared with 695 for Brumbaugh as a candidate for delegate.

In Centre County the only Republican contest of note was that between Representative Harry B. Scott and Professor C. L. Gramley for nomination for Assembly. Scott was renominated with a majority of 575, the vote being 1330 to to 755. The entire Penrose ticket won out in the County. For Auditor General Snyder defeated Ambler by 594, the vote being 1323 to 729. Kephart won easily in the County for State Treasurer. Swoope and Gaffney, for district national delegates, defeated Mayo and Arnold in the County by from 400 to 600. For alternate district delegates Mothersbaugh and Scott easily carried the County. Nelson E. Robb, the Brumbaugh candidate for alternate, lost out by nearly 600 votes. For State Committeeman Harris defeated Ashman by 845. Governor Brumbaugh, as a candidate for President, received 854 votes in the County, or about 1200 less than the total Republican vote polled. Roosevelt received about 100 votes, and there were a few votes for Ford and Hughes.

In the County the Democratic result was for the Palmer element. Palmer carried the County over Liebel for national committeeman by 775, the vote being 1082 to 307. Former Judge Orvis, of Bellefonte, who was nominated by the Palmer forces in the State for United States Senator, carried the County over Eugene C. Bonniwell, of Philadelphia, by 1295, the vote being 1399 to 104.

For numerous offices there were no contests. Congressman Rowland was renominated on the Republican ticket. The Democrats nominated W. E. Tobias for Congress, and M. I. Gardner, of Bellefonte, for Assembly. Colonel J. L. Spangler, of Bellefonte, was elected to the Democratic State Committee. Former Judge Orvis and John F. Short, the latter of Clearfield, were elected district delegates to the Democratic national convention. William G. Runkle was elected Democratic County Chairman.

Directed Palmer Campaign.

Surveyor of the Port Charles R. Kurtz, of Philadelphia, was an arrival in town this week, coming up to vote at Tuesday's primaries and also to greet his numerous friends. A fact not generally known, but one interesting nevertheless to the friends of Mr. Kurtz is that he directed the Democratic campaign in the State for the Palmer forces in the last weeks of the contest. He first took charge of the publicity end and later had full charge in directing the campaign work in various counties. That he handled it well would seem to be borne out by the victory for the Palmer element of the party on Tuesday.

BOMBERGER CONVICTED IN GREENSBURG COURT

FARMERS HIS ACCUSERS

Westmoreland County Stock Growers Among Alleged Victims—Man with Similar Name Collected Money from Centre County Farmers.

Some weeks ago "The Republican" published an article telling of the arrest in Greensburg, Pa., of one H. S. Bomberger, charged with false pretense in the collection of money from among farmers and stock raisers, and also of the fact that a man of a similar name had collected certain moneys from Centre County farmers. Last Friday's Greensburg "Daily Tribune" published the following, which is self-explanatory:—

H. S. Bomberger, of Palmyra, Lebanon county, was found guilty in the criminal courts here Tuesday afternoon of the charge of false pretense, preferred against him by one or more farmers and stock raisers in Westmoreland county. The trial was conducted before Judge A. D. McConnell.

The information charging Bomberger with false pretense was made before 'Squire J. Q. Truxal on February 2, 1916. The complaint was George S. Barnhart, a prominent farmer of Hempfield township, who allged that Bomberger, representing himself as treasurer of an alleged organization known as the "Pennsylvania State Cattleman's Protective association," persuaded him to pay to him $10.00 in money, and thus receive benefits that the alleged association was certain to bring to all stock raisers and farmers who became members. The formal charge made against Bomberger is as follows:

"That H. S. Bomberger did by false pretense secure from George Barnhart $10.00, and from others. In that he falsly pretended and represented to said persons that he represented and that he was the treasurer of the Pennsylvania State Cattleman's Protective association, and was authorized by said association to collect money for the association, and did, by false pretense, collect the said various sums, whereas, in truth and fact, there was no such association in existence, and he did not represent any such association, and did not appropriate said money to his use."

The information was made before the justice of the peace by County Detective A. C. Remaley, and the warrant for the arrest of Bomberger was turned over to Detective Paul Fightner for execution. Detective Fightner forwarded the warrant to the chief of police of Harrisburg, and on February 21, 1916 Bomberger was arrested. After a preliminary hearing the accused gave bail for his appearance at the May term of court.

During the course of the trial the checks which had been given to Bomberger in payment for membership in his alleged association by farmers and others were produced as evidence against the accused. They were given by George S. Barnhart, G. W. Waugaman, M. C. Sichel, and B. B. Kistler & Sons. Many others it was shown, paid Bomberger in cash. The attorneys for Bomberger have made application for a new trial.

The bond under which Bomberger was held for trial at court will be in force until the sentence of the court is pronounced, or until the case is entirely disposed of.

Propose to Raise $5,000,000.

A proposal to raise $5,000,000 by a world wide campaign for foreign mission purposes was indorsed last week by the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., which adopted a resolution setting aside the years 1918 and 1919 as centennial thanksgiving years for observance of the centennial of this branch of church activity. The board of foreign missions was authorized to prepare plans for celebrations in every Methodist church in the world.

Examination for Scholarship.

The examination for the McAllister freshman scholarship in the Pennsylvania State College will be given under the direction of the college on June 15th and 16th and will embrace English composition and classics, American history, algebra and plane geometry. The examination will be at State College.

B. P. SWARTZ SENTENCED FROM 10 TO 15 YEARS

BAIL RAISED TO $5000

A New Trial Refused and He is Taken to Jail Pending Arrival of His Bondsman—Counsel Fils Notice of Appeal to Higher Court.

B. Paul Swartz, of Howard, was on Monday sentenced by Judge Quigley to a term of not less than ten years or more than fifteen years in the Western Penitentiary. Swartz was convicted at the last term of court of having written a "black-hand" notice that was posted on the livery barn of W. H. Thompson, at Howard. Following his conviction Swartz appealed for a new trial. Argument was heard some time ago and on Monday Judge Quigley handed down a decree refusing a new trial and Swartz was called for sentence. The announcement that he should serve a term of from ten to fifteen years staggered Swartz. Counsel for the latter announced his intention to appeal to the higher courts. Judge Quigley thereupon stated that the bail bond for Swartz for $1,000 would be increased to $5,000. Burdine Butler, of Howard, the bondsman for Swartz, was not in court at the time and Swartz was accordingly taken to jail.

Frank Columbine, formerly of Howard and later located at Jersey Shore, who was convicted on a charge similar to that on which Swartz was sentenced, was also called for sentence but he did not appear.

The whereabouts of Columbine is a mystery to the court officials. He was not present when his appeal for a new trial was refused, nor has he turned up since. The last heard from him was that he was arrested in Williamsport in March for illegal train riding and that he was released from jail there April 1st. It is likely that the commonwealth will move to have his bail bond forfeited.

In sentencing Swartz Judge Quigley excoriated him for what he termed a long record of crime. He branded Swartz as a dangerous man to be at liberty, pointing out that Swartz had once served time in the penitentiary and frequently planned offenses for which others had been made to suffer. He declared that in imposing sentence he proposed to put Swartz where he could not be a menace to society for a long time to come. A few minutes after being sentenced Swartz was taken to jail by Sheriff Yarnell.

HELD FINAL DEBATE

Harrisburg Team Wins in Championship Contest at State College.

Centre County's High School debating team lost out in finals held at State College last Saturday, the Harrisburg team winning the decision of the judges. At that, the Centre Countians put up a creditable fight for the honors.

The contest was held in the Liberal Arts building. The judges were Rev. Mr. Willey, of Parsons Institute; Mr. Tuggev, principal of the Bethlehem Preparatory School, and Rev. Mr. Martin, pastor of the State College Presbyterian church. Clinton County won the inter-county decision and in the evening participated in the finals with Harrisburg for the State championship. The latter took the affirmative and Clinton County the negative on the following question:—

"Resolved, that international peace would be best promoted by extensive warlike preparations on the part of all great nations."

President Sparks presided and the judges were L. L. Sprague, president of Wyoming Seminary; F. G. Sigman, principal of the Allentown Preparatory School, and Rev. J. McK. Reilly, of State College. The judges were unanimous in awarding the decision to the Harrisburg debaters, who were Miss Ruth Beatty, Harold Eckert and Homer Kreider. The winners were presented with a silver cup, the gift of Vance C. McCormick, of Harrisburg, a member of the State College board of trustees. They also received bronze medals. The Centre County team was composed of Lee Frazier and Ray Durst, of Bellefonte, and Myles Thomas, of Boalsburg.

Trout Fisherman Fined.

The state treasury of Pennsylvania was presented last week with $70 by six young men from Sandy Ridge who fished on the land that is reserved and under the control of the Tyrone Rod and Gun club at Gardner and although two special men are patroling the stream every day, they managed in some way to land. State Game Warden Jacob Seizer, of Harrisburg happened to be over the mountain on the day this contribution was made and on his way back to Tyrone he noticed six men fishing near Gardner. He dropped off the train at this point and interviewed the men and at the same time took a peep at the speckled beauties. In the basket he found enough fish under six inches to run the day's pleasure to a sum of $70. The Tyrone Rod and Gun club will also bring action against the Sandy Ridge boys for fishing on the club property.

Motorists Had Their Troubles.

Charles Campbell and family, of Philipsburg, on Sunday motored to State College. On reaching Lemont his car was side-swiped by another car and pushed over against a fence, the auto being badly damaged and Mrs. Campbell receiving painful bruises. The car was finally supposed to be put in shape, and on trying it out by Mr. Campbell, his son, David, and another gentleman, it was soon found the steering gear would not work, and before it could be stopped they were dumped over an eight-foot embankment. Fortunately no one was injured to any marked extent, but the car was put out of commission again. The repairs were made and Mr. Campbell and family returned home on Monday.

SCHENCK PLEADS GUILTY SENTENCE ON MONDAY

Howard Squire Confesses Bounty Frauds on 10 Charges.

COAL MAN IS JAILED

Partner Given Limited Time to Make Settlement for Coal Sold After Being Attached—Grand Jury Finishes in Single Day.

Squire Hayes Schenck, of Howard convicted of bounty frauds at the last term of court, yesterday entered a plea of guilty and gave bail to the amount of $1,000 for his appearance in court next Monday morning for sentence. Schenck's plea was not entered in open court, but at a conference of counsel for both sides. Burdine Butler, of Howard, went on Schenck's bond.

Schenck was in court earlier in the day to face nine additional indictments for bounty frauds. Frederick J Shoyer, representing Attorney General Brown, was on hand to conduct cases for the commonwealth. The trial was scheduled to come up yesterday afternoon. Under agreement of counsel all proceedings suddenly ended.

Schenck's application for a new trial has been withdrawn. His original conviction stands and he enters a plea of guilty to the nine remaining indictments.

Court convened on Monday morning at 10 o'clock. A large portion of the morning session was taken up in hearing motions and petitions as presented by the several members of the bar.

The Grand Jury was called and sworn H. C. Yeager, shoe merchant of Bellefonte, being selected as foreman.

The Constables of the several Wards and Townships made their quadrenniel returns to the Court.

The civil list of trials was gone over and the following cases disposed of:

State-Centre-Electric Company vs. Toner A. Hugg, being an appeal, was transferred to the special week.

Priscilla A. Fye vs. Simon Zimmerman, a feigned issue, was continued at the costs of the plaintiff on account of the illness of a material witness.

The Kato Coal Company vs. Taylor Walker, John Anderson and Charles Herr, were brought into Court on a rule to show cause why an attachment should not issue against them for violation of a writ of estrepment. Charles Herr was discharged, John Anderson, sentenced to pay the costs, one dollar fine and ten days in the county jail, and Taylor Walker directed to pay to the Prothonotery until the final disposition of the case, the value of the coal removed from off the premises and was given until Monday, May 22, to make such payment.

Commonwealth vs. Gray W. Croyle, indicted for desertion and non-support of wife and child. Prosecutrix Margaret Croyle. The defendant plead guilty and was sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution and one dollar fine, and pay to his wife the sum of $15 per month and give bond to carry out the term of the sentence.

Commonwealth vs. T. A. Fye and W. B. Fye, indicted for larceny by bailee, prosecutor U. R. Shirey. This case grows out of the leasing of a pair of horses by the prosecutor to T. A. Fye on the 16th of July 1915, the lease to be ended six months after date and the lessee to pay for the lease at the rate of $50.00 per month. Some time prior to the middle of November payments not having been made as per the terms of the agreement or lease one of the prosecutor's agents and a Constable went to the place of T. A. Fye and were told that the team was at Mine No. 13, and when they got to this place they found the team had gone and they followed the tracks of the wagon and team and found the wagon at a Mr. Fye's and continued to track the team but lost trace of it. The defense being that T. A. Fye had turned in to the prosecutor a horse worth $200 and had given his note for $300. And that the agreement was a conditional sale and that therefore the defendants were not guilty of the crime charged. The Court ruled that the lease was a bailment and not a conditional sale and submitted the case to the jury. Verdict on Tuesday afternoon of guilty.

Commwealth vs. George Mothersbaugh, charged with assault and threats to kill, prosecutors E. P. VanAkin and J. T. Irvin. The defendant on Saturday, the 13th of May, waived the finding of the Grand Jury and plead guilty. Whereupon the Court sentenced him to pay

What to Feed Small Chicks.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture through its poultry expert, W. Theo. Whitman, recommends the following procedure in the feeding of small chicks:

First, do not feed too soon. Quiet and sleep are very much more important than food for the first forty-eight hours after exclusion from the shell. Under natural incubation and brooding they usually get this, but with incubator and brooder, many people do not realize that their little chicks simply must have quiet and sleep if they are to do well.

Second, water, with access to sand or outdoor range. None of these should be overdone the first week. It is important for that time, but a very little will go a long way.

Third, a soft feed like sweet, clean milk and stale bread in crumbly condition, or fresh raw eggs, beat up with stale bread crumbs fed on a clean board in small quantities, regularly, every two or three hours. Hard boiled eggs, pepper raw corn meal and water, and similar impossible things are often fed but if the chicks live they live in spite of them.

Fourth, after a few days old, ordinary commercial chick feed buried in an inch or two of cut clover or non musty hay chaff, should be fed alternately or, if the chicks are hatched as strong as they should be, and labor and "fussing" is to be avoided, then this commercial chick feed that can be bought everywhere should be fed as suggested, in litter, or scattered around the brood coop from the first.

Fifth, green food after the first few days, two or three times daily is extremely important. Better yet is all day access to young, tender growing grass. Too many people try to grow chicks without this and either fail or make only a half success.

Sixth, chicks, of the Mediterranean class, like Leghorns, if they cannot have free range and plenty of insect life, must have regularly, daily, after a week old, some lean meat, (par-boiled beef or sheep hearts, usually to be had cheap and cut into small dice are good) or cottage cheese, or milk. These are valuable in the order named. If good, clean, safe beef scraps can be had they stand second. If small chicks of this kind do not get the above, nine times out of ten, they will have droopy wings and either die or be permanently stunted.

Lastly, while proper feed and proper methods of feeding will often save delicate chicks and make good profitable chickens many times, if the parent stock has been fed or handled wrong, the eggs for hatching improperly handled, the incubation or the brooding been faulty (five or six times or even shorter periods are enough) no matter what is fed, small chicks will droop, will have a whitish diarrhoea, (not "white diarrhoea" necessarily) and will die. Warmth, shelter, exercise, and sleep in the proper amounts must accompany good feed and good feeding and economy in the latter is more than wasteful, it is foolish.

John Decker Dead.

John Decker, a well known Nittany valley farmer, died Thursday, May 4, at his home in Hublersburg, of old age. Deceased was a son of Adam and Margaret Decker, and was born in Hublersburg, April 20, 1828 making his age 88 years and 8 days. He married Miss Mary Clevenstine, who died 18 years ago. Surviving are the following children: Mrs. George Rockey, of Zion; Christ, of Bellefonte; Edward, of Lock Haven; William, of Jacksonville; Herbert, C. A. and Mrs. H. A. Kessinger, of Pitcairn, and Mrs. J. I. Yarnell, of Hublersburg. Three sisters and two brothers also survive namely: Mrs. Jacob Kephart, of Millheim; Mrs. Samuel Stamm, of Loganton; Mrs. Thomas Shantz, of Kansas; George, of Missouri, and William, of Hublersburg.

John C. Eaton Dead.

John C. Eaton died on Friday afternoon of last week at his late home near Blanchard. He had been in failing health for about one year, although he had suffered for a long time from a chronic ailment contracted during his service in the Civil war. The deceased was a farmer and at times operated a sawmill. He had resided near Blanchard for many years and was well known and highly esteemed. He was a member of the Beech Creek Presbyterian church. Surviving are his widow and two children, George W. Eaton and Mrs. Elias Waltz, both of Blanchard. Funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the late home. Rev. A. D. Bateman, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiating. Interment was made in the Blanchard cemetery.

To Appeal License Ruling.

The temperances forces of Clearfield county intend carrying the battle against wholesale and brewery licenses into the higher courts. It was stated that injunctions would be asked against anyone attempting to operate under the license issued by Judge Bell, on the ground that they were not properly advertised, and that Judge Bell himself was doubtful concerning the legality of the procedure. Attorneys for the applicants are equally certain that their contention will be upheld by the higher court and the licensees are nearly all doing business under the new license.

Getting up steam is more apt to lead to success than all the hot air in the world.

An Escape

By ELINOR MARSH

A young Russian named Ivan Ivanovitch, living at Kars, not many miles north of the boundary line between Russia and Turkey, found employment across the border and while there fell in love with a young Turkish girl. Her father refused her to him unless he would renounce the Christian religion and become a Mohammedan. Ivan was averse to doing so, but it is easy for one who is in love to find a salve for his conscience, and he finally consented. He professed adhesion to the prophet, and the two were married. This is a simple matter with the Turks, for the bride is conducted to the groom's house and left there with him. There is no such ceremony as among Christians.

Of course the young husband's conversion was a form, but he was obliged to go to prayers in the mosque like any Mohammedan and otherwise conform to that religion. After awhile he grew tired of this and, taking his wife with him, went back to the other side of the border.

Now, it was not long after the Ivanovitch family made this move that the Grand Duke Nicholas marched by, impressing men into his army as he advanced, taking Ivan among the number. When the latter found that they were marching on Erzerum he was much concerned, for it was near that city that he had married his wife, and if he should be captured and recognized fighting in a Christian army against the followers of Mohammed he would suffer as dreadful fate as could be visited on a renegade.

Ivanovitch was on the flank of his army and ten miles to the northwest of Erzerum. There he was captured by the Turks and carried with them in their retreat before the Russians toward Trebizond.

Just before the Russian advance into Turkey, Mme. Ivanovitch went on a visit to her people and was there during the surrender of Erzerum by the Turks. One day while looking at some Russian prisoners who were being marched by, she saw her husband among them.

The good woman was seized with the same trepidation as Ivan, that he might be recognized as a Mohammedan renegade. Wishing to be near him to afford him such protection as she might be able, she followed the prisoners, their captors taking them along in retreat, and saw them go into bivouac for the night.

Now, there was no opportunity for a woman to mingle among men in Turkey, for Turkish women and men do not associate together as in other countries. The only way Mme. Ivanovitch could go among the soldiers and prisoners was by assuming man's attire. Entering the women's quarters of a house near by, she prevailed upon a wife to procure her a suit of her husband's, which she put on and, carrying her own clothes in a bundle under her arm, went to the place where the prisoners were. There she made friends with the guard and offered her services for any duty she might perform. She was told that she might take part in watching the prisoners, and, obtaining a gun, she stood guard with the rest.

Toward midnight she took position near her husband and dropped her bundle beside him, at the same time making signs to him to roll into some underbrush a few yards from him. Slowly edging in that direction, he came to the edge of the brush. Most of the guard were drowsy. One of them was near enough to observe Ivan, and Mme. Ivanovitch placed herself between the two. Then the prisoner rolled into the brush.

As soon as he examined the contents of the bundle he saw his wife's design. As a man in Russian uniform it would be impossible for him to make his way through the Turkish lines, but as a woman he would have every advantage, especially as the face of a Turkish woman is always hidden by a veil. Under cover of the darkness he took off his clothes and put on those of his wife, then made his way out of the bivouac of guards and prisoners.

Coming to the road over which he had been marched during the day, he walked along it till he came to a house. There he took refuge in an outhouse till morning, when he rapped at the women's quarters. He was admitted, made up a story of having been to see an officer to whom she (he) was married, and was treated with kindness.

Here he was in double danger, for he was not only a renegade Mussulman, but a man in the women's quarters, a place where not even a husband may enter unless his wife is without visitors. However, he insisted on remaining veiled and got out as soon as he could without exciting suspicion.

Following the road back toward the Russians, he modestly withdrew to one side on meeting Turkish soldiers who were hurrying before their conquerors. At last he met the Russian advance and, lifting his veil, revealed himself as a man and a Russian.

The next meeting between Ivanovitch and his wife was in a hospital within the Russian lines. He had been taken ill and relegated to the quarters of the sick. Mme. Ivanovitch had made her way back toward Erzerum and had been hoping that he had made good his escape. She had gone with Red Cross nurses to help in the hospital, and one day as she was passing his cot the two met.

She was free to kneel beside him, and the two embraced with thanks, the one to God, the other to Allah.

MUST BE TAGGED

Constables Will be Paid $1 for Killing Untagged Dogs.

Commissioners of counties who have neglected or refused to order constables to destroy dogs which have not been assessed and registered in boroughs and townships, will be sued by the state for failure to comply with the dog laws of 1893 and 1915. Arrangements have been made with the attorney general's department by the state department game commission for action at law.

The attorney general's department has informed the game commission that the acts make it mandatory upon commissioners to enforce the law, complaint having been made that birds beneficial to farmers were being destroyed by wild dogs, while it was also found that one of the chief reasons why the department of agriculture could not secure more co-operation in raising of sheep, was the number of wild dogs.

Thousands of dollars have been paid to owners of sheep and other domestic animals, destroyed or injured by dogs in the last year. Constables who fail to kill dogs when ordered to do so will be taxed $2 for every dog which other persons are employed to kill out. When the officers kill dogs, they will be paid $1 per dog.

State Agricultural Notes.

Farm labor is reported very scarce throughout the State and some districts report that the farmers are greatly handicapped by lack of help.

The Washington county commissioners have asked for the aid of the State Police in killing unlicensed dogs. The work will be done in those districts where the constables have failed to kill the dogs as required by the State law. Each dog killed will be charged up against the constable at the rate of $2 each, and that sum taken from any costs due him from the county.

The best average price of wheat on April 1 was obtained in Pennsylvania counties as follows: Elk, $1.25; Warren, $1.23; Cameron, Luzerne, McKean and Potter, $1.20; Bradford, Monroe, Pike and Susquehanna, $1.18.

The low average price of wheat on April 1 was reported in Pennsylvania counties as follows: Perry, $1.03; Butler, Juniata and Snyder, $1.04; Armstrong, Washington and Cumberland, $1.05; Centre and Columbia, $1.06.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture has brought suit against the Standard Linseed Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, for selling as pure linseed oil, an oil adulterated almost fifty per cent, with mineral oil. Two suits were brought in Wayne county and fines of fifty dollars paid in both instances.

Many samples of lime are being received by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture for analysis in accordance with the new lime law which became effective January 1, 1916.

Potatoes ranged in price according to April reports from ninety cents to the farmers in Snyder county to $1.42 a bushel in Delaware and Philadelphia counties. In Beaver and Cameron counties the price paid was $1.40. The low prices were as follows: Snyder, 90 cents; Union, 95 cents; Crawford, 98 cents; and Centre, Clarion, Jefferson, Fulton, Lebanon and Potter, $1.00.

The June Woman's Home Companion.

The June issue of the Woman's Home Companion is called "The Bride's Number." It contains a large amount of material adapted to households where June weddings will be celebrated, and short stories that deal with June brides. Among the short stories are "Millingham Decides," by Ellis Parker Butler, "Their Devious Eatings" by Mary Heaton Vorse, "The Mirror," by Margaret Spalding Gerry, "Pink Satin Slippers," by Gertrude MacNulty Stevens, and "The End of the Reel," by Mary Hastings Bradley.

Margaret Deland, Sophie Kerr and Fannie Heaslip Lea continue respectively the three big serials, "The Rising Tide," "The Blue Envelop" and "Chloe Malone."

The special articles include: "How I Made a Good Husband of My Son," "Mother Joins the Firm," "The Finer Points of Honeymooning," "Oh, the Poor Farmer's Wife!" The Lover and His Lass," and there are other articles in the regular departments.

In the department called "Better Films" is an interesting interview with the great actor and stage manager, Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree. He says that Shakespear would probably write for the movies if he lived today—and tells us why. Other departments are "The Woman Motorist," conducted by C. H. Claudy, the automobile expert, "Better Babies," "Your Son's Career," conducted by a successful business man, "The Exchange," "Entertainment," etc. Fashions are discussed by Grace Margaret Gould. The Alco Gravure section contains many attractive illustrations including the results of the prize photograph contest entitled "Children at Play." There is a large amount of practical and interesting material in the section for younger readers and the section on handicraft. As a whole the June issue of the Woman's Home Companion is an unusually bright and attractive number.

The Laboratory.

To many minds the mention of a laboratory brings some haunting suggestion of flickering furnace fires and calabistic signs. In the first dim morning of scientific endeavor knowledge protected itself from ignorance by a cloak of mystery. That has vanished. Science now stands close beside us ever ready to aid, says State Health Commissioner Dixon.

To the practicing physician the laboratory has become a necessity. There are numerous diseases which can be determined with absolute accuracy by means of laboratory tests and with less delay than is possible without this aid.

The basis of any successful treatment must be an accurate knowledge of the disease. This is why it is necessary for the physician to have recourse to the laboratory. It makes certain what would otherwise be in doubt.

With the microscope we can determine tissue changes which indicate disease and the chemist can determine the character of certain fluids of the body which are caused by diseases of the various organs.

Owing to the rapid advance in medical science laboratory work has become a specialty in itself. It is impossible for the practitioner in the majority of instances, or even the small hospitals throughout the State, to maintain well equipped laboratories with pathologists.

In Pennsylvania, the State Department of Health maintains a free laboratory to aid the practitioners in rural districts and municipalities too small to maintain their own.

The Inner Secret of New Post Toasties

A glance at one of these new corn flakes reveals novel, little bubbles which are raised by the quick, intense heat of a new process of manufacture.

These bubbles are an identifying feature of these--the only corn flakes with a self-developed, delicious corn flavour--the only flakes that do not have to depend largely on cream and sugar for palatability.

Try some of the New Toasties dry--they're good that way--the children munch them like candy. But of course the delicious new flavour is more pronounced when the flakes are served with sugar and cream.

The New Post Toasties do not waste into "chaff" in the package, and they don't mush down in cream like other flakes. They're a vast improvement over old-fashioned corn flakes and have met with enthusiastic approval everywhere.

The Story of a Castaway

By CLARISSA MACKIE

It was a morning of early spring in New York harbor. On the shores of the two rivers that flow east and west of Manhattan Island and the great bay south of it yachts were being overhauled, their engines oiled, their sails repaired, their furniture uncovered. Indeed, everything was being done to prepare them for commission.

From the dock of a yacht club in the East river a party was pulled in a dinghy to a trim auxiliary craft anchored a short distance out in the river. It had already been prepared for a lengthy trip. They were Dr. and Mrs. Mortimer and their daughter, Evelyn, a girl of eighteen. Frederic Doerr, engaged to Evelyn, went out with the others to the yacht, but after going down the companionway, ostensibly to inspect the cabin, but really to bid each other a fond goodby, the young couple returned to the deck, and Doerr was pulled ashore. There he lingered while the anchor of the yacht was got up and began to steam down the river. Then, with a last wave, which was returned by his young fiancee, he turned away.

Dr. Mortimer and his family were bent on a cruise in southern waters. It was late in the season for a land trip to the south, but not on the ocean, and it was their intention to visit Cuba, the Panama canal and other objects of interest, remaining ashore only a day or two at a time.

They had reached a point off the coast of Florida and were steaming along at midnight in a fog when there came a crash. Those in their berths below arose, dressed hastily and went on deck. Down in the hold the water was coming through a hole. Dr. Mortimer examined it and, believing that the yacht would surely sink, went on deck again and told his wife and daughter that they had better prepare for such a result. Mrs. Mortimer preferred to die aboard the yacht rather than commit herself to the black waters, but Evelyn, remembering her lover and that it was her duty to try to live for him, suffered her father to get together articles for a raft, and when he had bound them together and lashed her to it he launched her upon the deep.

This was unfortunate. The water did not gain in the yacht as rapidly as had been expected, and when dawn came and the fog cleared away there was a steamer on the port bow not a mile away. Assistance was immediately afforded, and the pumps were manned. Before the day ended the yacht was in condition to pursue its journey and arrived safely at a Cuban port.

* * * * * * *

The sun shone down on the stretch of white beach on the fringe of palms bending in the soft south wind.

Blake Worthing at the wheel of his motorboat idled in these pleasant Florida waters, wondering if it was time to return to his cottage on the beach and waiting for his mother's signal that luncheon was ready.

Something strange came bobbing over the waters toward him. In the distance it looked like a gray island. Later it resolved into various articles of a ship with a human being lashed upon it.

As soon as Blake made this discovery he turned the motorboat about and met the approaching raft.

When he had made it fast to his own craft he gently touched the sea soaked bundle of humanity and discovered it to be a girl—a girl so pale and lifeless that he believed her to be dead.

His mother met him at the little pier and took the bundle from his arms. She was a tall, majestic woman, strong and vigorous and young.

"Where did you find her, Blake?" asked Mrs. Worthing.

Blake told her in a few words.

"I'm going over to Barnacle after the doctor—do the best you can for her, mother," said Blake, as he changed his wet clothing and hurried off up the beach.

Mrs. Worthing put the castaway into her little spare room under the cottage roof, and with the help of Mandy, the maid, she endeavored to bring consciousness to the girl.

But in vain. It was not until after the physician had arrived and worked over her for another hour that at last the girl opened a pair of forgetmenot blue eyes and smiled faintly at the anxious face bent above her. Then she went to sleep.

She did not awake until morning, and Mrs. Worthing discovered that while she remembered many things about the dreadful wreck of a vessel bound for South America, she could not piece together her past life or identify herself completely.

"My name," she said slowly, "is Evelyn Ames—my father is Dr. Ames—and we were taking a vacation—father—oh, my poor father!" Then she broke down and cried because she could only guess her father's fate. She could not even remember where she had lived, and although Mrs. Worthing and her son labored patiently to brighten the dulled memory their efforts were in vain.

"Please don't bother about me. I cannot remember," she would cry wearily.

Mrs. Worthing was not ill pleased at this. She had always longed for a daughter, and now she proposed to adopt Evelyn Ames for her own. Blake, who had fallen in love with the beautiful castaway, smiled secretly and thought that if he had his way the stranger would be his mother's daughter, but she would also be his wife.

And in the meantime the Worthings could find no trace of the nameless vessel on which Evelyn had sailed for Rio Janeiro. There had been no vessels lost, and investigation showed that there was no physician by the name of Ames who might be the father of Evelyn. They advertised and wrote letters, and in the end they were no wiser than before.

Then one fair morning, while the sun shone on the summer seas and the wind murmured among the palms, Blake Worthing told Evelyn of his love. Blushingly she gave her heart and hand into his tender keeping. Mrs. Worthing, delighted at the outcome, gathered them both to her heart.

It was when the engagement had been two weeks old that a blow came to Blake Worthing. He was preparing to go to Barnacle, where the offices of his fruit industry were situated, when he heard a sharp scream from the front veranda.

He dashed downstairs and found Evelyn gazing, pale and wide eyed, at the ocean.

"Dearest, what is the matter?" he asked.

She shuddered and hid her face in her hands.

"Oh, Blake, I have remembered!"

"Remembered? That is splendid, dear. Tell me."

"My name is Evelyn Ames Mortimer—my father is Dr. Ames Mortimer of New York—and, oh, Blake, how can I tell you?" Her slender shoulders shook with sobs.

"Tell me," he gently urged.

"I cannot marry you," she breathed.

"Why not?"

"I have remembered"—tragically.

"You have remembered what?"

"That I am already engaged."

"You are engaged? You were engaged when you sailed away? And you had forgotten that?"

She nodded listlessly.

"Then you do not love me," he said, rising and drawing his hands away from her grasp.

But she clung desperately to him.

"Ah, I do—I do love you, Blake! That is the misery of it all. I look back and think of Frederic Doerr, and I wonder how I could have dreamed of marrying him."

"Let me think it over, Evelyn," said Blake as he went away. All day while he dictated letters or interviewed customers Evelyn's pale, frightened face came between. Toward night he sent a telegram to Frederic Doerr's address in New York, and the second day afterward he met him at Barnacle station and took him to the cottage.

Frederic Doerr was a tall, thin, dark man with grave eyes and a preoccupied manner. He appeared to be extremely nervous when speaking of Evelyn, although he talked freely of her father, Dr. Mortimer, who had been saved.

He told Worthing how the Mortimers had sailed on a private yacht, and in the excitement following a collision, with visions of immediately sinking, Evelyn had been lashed to a raft and cast adrift.

The storm tossed yacht had reached a Cuban port, and Dr. Mortimer, although giving his daughter up for lost, had made every effort to find her. It was strange that the threads of inquiry instituted by the Worthings and Evelyn's father had never crossed.

"She has told us of her engagement to you," said Blake in his blunt way. "You will want to see her alone, I suppose."

"If you please. I think you and Mrs. Worthing had better be present," said Doerr nervously.

So when Blake told Evelyn that he had brought her fiance to see her and that her father was still living her joy in the latter news was dampened by the approaching interview with the man she had ceased to love.

"I must keep my promise to Frederic," she assured Mrs. Worthing, as they descended the stairs. "He said once that he did not care to live if I would not marry him."

Mrs. Worthing smiled wisely, but her arm tightened around the shrinking girl's waist as they entered the living room.

"Evelyn!" cried Doerr, starting forward with outstretched hands. "How delighted your father will be! I wired him at once of your safety."

He made no attempt to embrace her, and Evelyn was manifestly relieved.

The Worthings turned to leave, but Frederic Doerr put out a detaining hand.

"Please do not go," he said, with embarrassment. "There is something I must confess, and Evelyn will need her friends around her. I am ashamed to say that"—his voice dropped almost to a whisper—"I have been faithless to Evelyn Mortimer, one of the sweetest girls God ever created! Believing her to be dead, I permitted myself to be attracted by another woman—and, to make a long story short, I am married. I am no longer free."

Frederic Doerr did not expect the demonstration that followed his news.

Mrs. Worthing clasped her hands and cried for joy, while Blake opened his arms to receive Evelyn Mortimer.

"Why, nobody seems to care very much," remarked Mr. Doerr, with a whimsical smile.

Then Mrs. Worthing took him outside and explained, and while they were gone Blake and Evelyn sealed their betrothal with a long kiss.

"You belong to me, sweetheart," whispered Blake. "The sea gave you to me—you drifted into my heart."

Middle Aged Lovemaking

By ETHEL HOLMES

Amos Chidleigh sat at his desk one hot July morning mopping his brow. Then he said to himself:

"Why should I stay in this hot town when I can just as well go where it's cool? Tomkins can run the business as well as I. I don't care whether there is any profit for a couple of months or not. Why should I? My securities pay me $10,000 a year, and that's enough for a lone bachelor without any other income."

The only objection to Mr. Chidleigh's going to the country was that he was too old to join in with the young persons he would meet and he wouldn't know what to do with himself. He was forty-two years old. However, he made up his mind to get a sniff of sea air, and, leaving his business in the hands of his chief clerk, he got into his car and after a hundred miles' spin pulled up in front of a summer hotel overlooking the ocean.

As he went up the steps he noticed a lady sitting on the piazza whose face was familiar to him.

"I do believe," he said to himself, "that's Del Smith."

Del Smith had been a "flame" of Chidleigh's twenty years before. If indeed it were she he need not be lonely. He might get some amusement by remaining incog. and making her acquaintance as a stranger. Going to the hotel office, a clerk placed the register before him, and he signed his name so that it looked like A. Chindey.

The next day he was sitting on the piazza near the lady he supposed to be his old flame, she being in company with an elderly woman who looked to Chidleigh very much as he remembered her mother twenty years before. They were regretting not being able to hire an auto for a ride.

"Ladies," said Chidleigh, "I have an auto which is at your service, and I will be happy to drive you wherever you wish to go."

After some parleying the offer was accepted, and the trio spent a pleasant afternoon visiting various points of interest in the vicinity. That was the beginning of an acquaintance or, if the lady was Chidleigh's old flame, the renewal of one. On the beach the next morning she sat alone—her mother preferred to remain in her room—and Chidleigh joined her. He did not ask her name, but he propounded some leading questions, the replies to which convinced him that he had been mistaken in the person.

He was disappointed in this, but the lady gave him every encouragement to be friendly, telling him that she and her mother knew no one at the hotel and would be very glad to see as much of him as he liked during their stay. To this Chidleigh declared that he was in the same lonely condition.

Notwithstanding the replies to his leading questions Chidleigh could not divest himself of the feeling that the lady was Adele Smith. Going to the hotel register, he hunted up the name, but not finding a recent arrival of Smiths he asked the clerk for information, and he showed him the name, "Mrs. Turnlee and daughter." This confounded the investigator, but he would not give it up that the daughter was Del Smith.

However, Chidleigh found association with Miss Turnlee more and more pleasant every day. He took her and her mother out in his car every day that the mother would go, and when she declined his invitation he took the daughter.

One day when they were driving alone together they left the car and sat on a dune overlooking the ocean. Chidleigh felt that they were drawn nearer together from the fact that they were far from any one else and the expanse of sky and water above and before them were so vast.

"You remind me," he said to her, "of a girl I knew when I was a youngster. I was twenty-two; she was eighteen. I was drawn to her, but at that age there are so many girls for the boys and so many boys for the girls that one is not inclined to choose and pick. I wish now I could be the age I was then. I would provide against my present solitary condition."

"I, too, have such a memory. I knew a young man whom I considered the pink of perfection. I wished he would make love to me; but he didn't. You men have a great advantage over us women in that respect."

"Do you remember his name?"

"Do you remember the girl's name?"

"Yes."

"Let us make an exchange."

"Very well; she was Adele Smith."

"He was Amos Chidleigh."

Amos turned and looked at her fixedly.

"How is it that you are Miss Turnlee?"

"I'm not; I'm Miss Smith. My mother married a second time."

"Do you know that I am Amos Chidleigh?"

"Of course I do. I recognized you when I saw you come up the hotel steps the day of your arrival."

"Do you regret being a spinster?"

"Of course I do. Every spinster does."

"Let's make up for lost time. Will you marry me?"

"I will."

Given a man of forty-two and a woman of thirty-eight sitting on a dune overlooking the ocean in the twilight, a crescent moon overhead, just betrothed, and despite their middle age we may conjecture the rest of the picture.

DR. THOMAS E. GREEN
"THE BURDEN OF THE NATIONS"

Traveler, author, lecturer, gifted by nature with unusual grace and poise, past master in the use of the English language, builder of sentences.

"Such an oration as one hears but once in a lifetime.

"There have been few platform orators who have created a more profound impression than he. Few have proved so fascinating and at the same time so profoundly instructive."

"The Burden of the Nations" is not only a fascinating lecture, but a distinct contribution to a deep and profound subject in which the whole civilized world is most deeply interested.

The universal verdict of all who have been so fortunate as to hear Dr. Green comports with the above declarations.

HENRY KELLEY OF THE BIJOU SINGERS.

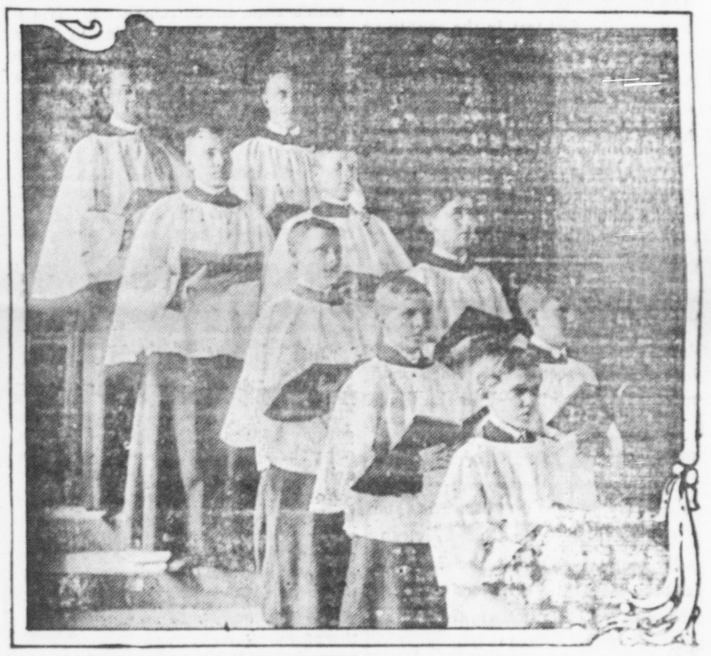
He is a big fellow, with a ready smile and a winning way. You are bound to like him personally and his voice. Hear it and pass your own comment.

As a boy, Kelley ushered at the Boston Opera House. The great singers of worldwide reputation who sang there taught him the little secrets and arts of singing.

Gradually as his powers developed Kelley became noticed by the best critics in Boston and New England. They predict for him a wonderful future.

His voice is a rich, resonant baritone, of excellent timbre and under perfect control.

Boy Choir at Chautauqua



Aside from the delightful and refreshing novelty of seeing on the platform the sweet, youthful faces of these boys, you may expect to hear a perfectly trained organization of uncommon merit and musical worth.

Their program will be divided into distinct features. "The Angelus," presented with special scenery and the vestments, introduces secular and sacred songs. The other half will be given without the vestments and will feature more the interesting, cheery songs so dear to the American boy.

The Venetian Troubadours at Chautauqua

The Venetian Troubadours, with Victor's Band, on the last day. Their presentation of Italian street scenes, with the songs and music of the common people, is a pleasing variation that all enjoy.

ROSANI

Wonder Worker and Novelty Entertainer. For pleasing, refined and astonishing novelties he cannot be equaled. Dexterity, combined with natural skill and pleasing manner, go far toward making his entertainment the most artistic, instructive as well as amusing, as it appeals to all, both old and young. As this act needs a little explanation, we wish to say he is no magician, but a manipulator and balancer of various objects, among them being whips, plates, balls, pipes, sticks, bowls, bottles, glasses, hats, swords, tops and many other peculiar shaped articles of different weights and sizes.

Rosani lives in topsy turvy land. His rapid fire manipulations and balancing stunts afford no end of unique entertainment. For the time being all ideas of the natural laws of the universe are forgotten.

It is a great misfortune not to have enough wit to speak well or not enough judgment to keep silent.—La Bruyere.

The New York "World's" Macedonian cry for the Republicans also to nominate Wilson seems to have fallen on deaf ears, and it looks as though Wilson would have to get along with such Democratic support for re-election as Bryan will permit him to have.

In dealing with the Philippines bill the House not only displayed scant consideration for the views of the President as expressed in a letter which he wrote to the Democratic caucus, but there was also demonstrated a lack of courtesy for the Senate which would have caused a good deal of a commotion a few years ago. The House not only rejected the Senate bill, but it adopted a bill which had never even been reported to the House, and then instructed its conferees to accept no modifications of the essential provisions of its legislation. This is conclusive evidence of the lack of team work in the Democratic party which Mr. Wilson has always insisted upon having. Not only can he not secure acquiescence from the House in plans which he has much at heart, but the House will not work in consonance with the Senate.

PRIMARY RESULTS.

Locally the one interesting contest at Tuesday's primaries was that between Representative Harry B. Scott, of Philipsburg, and Professor Gramley, of Rebersburg, for the Republican nomination for Assembly. The returns show the renomination of Mr. Scott by a substantial margin.

The contest was of peculiar interest in that it was the first test in the county on local option among Republicans, only. Professor Gramley was on the local option end of the issue, Mr. Scott declining to commit himself for or against. The result would seem to again demonstrate the truth of the frequently expressed belief that in such a contest there are many who do not vote as they talk.

Mr. Scott and Mr. Gramley are to be congratulated on the clean, manly contest waged by them. They demonstrated that they were big and broad enough to refrain from personalities. Such mud slinging as was indulged in at the wind-up of the campaign merely served to emphasize lack of tact and political ballast.

As we have pointed out, Mr. Scott and Mr. Gramley put up a good, clean, friendly contest. Now let the supporters of both candidates turn in and work for the election for the winner at the primaries. With united party support the re-election of Mr. Scott is assured.

Cook Book as Hospital Benefit.

At a meeting recently held, the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Bellefonte Hospital adopted a novel plan for raising much needed funds for the building of their X ray laboratory. It was decided to compile and distribute cook books made up from the best known and home-tried recipes that can be secured in Centre County. It is requested that all ladies of Centre County sufficiently interested in the purpose will send a tried and favored recipe to the secretary, Mrs. Edmund Blanchard, Bellefonte, Pa. From these recipes a book will be made up and sold throughout the County. Every purchaser of the book assists materially in the laudable projects of the society. It is also necessary to have the co-operation of the business interests. To attain this end the auxiliary has arranged with the Misses Carrie and Myrtle Miller to call on the different business and industrial establishments throughout Centre County to explain the plan in full. They will have the endorsed credentials of the society and it is sincerely hoped that they receive the assistance necessary to make the project a most glowing success.

Mr. Buddington's Fortune

It Was Bestowed Where It Would Do the Most Good

By ETHEL HOLMES

Young Mrs. Buddington was a model bride. Perhaps the word "enduring" would better describe her. She had married a man's man, and a man's man, especially when very young, is easily drawn from his home. Tom Buddington had scarcely returned from his wedding journey before he was waylaid by his former associates and induced to spend an evening with them, leaving his wife at home alone.

Tom knew this was all wrong. At midnight he succeeded in tearing himself away from his companions and went home. The house was dark and without sound. He put his latchkey into the lock very quietly and went upstairs softly. This was not because he feared to awaken his wife, for he didn't believe she was asleep. It was rather the result of a guilty conscience. He would have liked to hear a sweet voice say: "That you, dearie? Had a good time?" But he entered the dressing room next the bedroom without any greeting. Looking in where Bess was sleeping, by the light turned low he saw her peacefully slumbering.

Tom was both relieved and disappointed. He was pleased that his bride had not lain awake waiting for him, but he would have liked a brief chat with her before going to sleep himself. The lady was not asleep; she was pretending. She was a wise woman. If she cheerfully received her husband after his return from his bachelor friends she would have encouraged him to go to them again. If she upbraided him it would have a tendency to drive him away from her. Tom went to sleep ungreeted and unreproached. He resolved that he would not do so any more.

But Tom's effort to be good proved a failure. A young man, especially a man's man, needs relaxation. His error was not in this; it was in failing to provide his wife with relaxation also, or, rather, in forcing her to spend a considerable number of evenings alone. If it was not practicable to furnish her with company he should have remained with her, even if he did need relaxation, for she needed it as much as he did, probably more, since her place during the day was at home, and it was natural that in the evening she should need change of scene. Unfortunately Tom's income was not sufficient to enable them to go out to theaters or such other places of amusement.

"Just you wait, dearie," Tom said to his wife one evening when he was going out with a couple of men friends, "till Uncle Alec shuffles off this mortal coil, and I'll stop this going out without you. You shall have all the opera and the other amusements you like."

Now, Uncle Alec was a childless bachelor, who had worked and saved never having married because he thought he couldn't afford to marry till he had come to old age and a fortune without any one except his nephew to inherit his money. He had therefore pitched upon Tom for the purpose, and it was all settled that the young man was to have $100,000 at the old man's death.

Tom, being sensible of this prospective advantage, aimed to show his uncle proper attention. Since both were engaged during the day, the evening was the only time that the dutiful young man could pay his respects to the old gentleman. Bess understood that one night every week was to be devoted to this purpose. Tom went to see his uncle with tolerable regularity, and when he omitted to do so his wife understood that he had made the visit, though on such omissions Tom was enjoying his bachelor friends. Sometimes on his regular nights for visiting his uncle he would take Bess with him. She was a great favorite with the elder Buddington, which pleased Tom very much, for it strengthened the younger in the matter of his prospective fortune.

When the Buddingtons had been married a decade the wife did not need her husband's companionship so much as at first because she was taken up with several little children who had come to her in the meanwhile. Tom continued still to be a man's man and found a good deal to take him out. Indeed, there was more to absorb his attention every year. He dabbled in a small way in politics, having some taste for wire pulling, and was a member of various associations. He needed no excuses for going out evenings, for there was always a committee meeting or something of the kind that served the purpose. None of these engagements brought in any money, and the practical Mrs. Buddington was not made the better satisfied with her husband's absences by pecuniary gain.

But she did not complain. Tom said that it was the duty of a citizen to take an interest in the government of his country, his state or his city, as each needed his attention. There was no gainsaying this, and Bess was not the woman to interfere with whatever her husband considered his duty. She made the monthly stipend go as far as it was possible to make it go, patched the children's clothes and pinched in every way. The elder Buddington might have helped the family, but men who devote their lives to piling up money usually do their giving in a way that will afford a return, even if that return is merely a higher standing in the community in which they live. They are not likely to hide their lights under a bushel. Buddington senior held on to every cent he had and only arranged for the disposition of his fortune after his death because he could not take it with him.

But for this reason and because it had absorbed his whole life he was much concerned as to its going where he wished to have it go when he could no longer use it himself.

One evening he sent for Tom to come and see him. Tom was away from home and had told his wife that he was going to a meeting of householders of his ward to select a candidate for councilman. Bess sent word to Mr. Buddington to that effect, giving the place of the committee meeting. He telephoned there and was told that Tom had just left for his club. Mr. Buddington had not been aware that his nephew was a member of a club. He had never considered that he could afford such a luxury himself and could not see how Tom with his limited income and a family could do so. The old gentleman did not send to the club for Tom, but he did send to his home after 11 o'clock for him, to learn that his nephew had not yet returned.

When Tom came in at 1 o'clock in the morning and learned that his uncle had sent for him he was troubled. He knew the old gentleman's proclivities well and had not informed him of any expense that he incurred that his uncle would consider he should avoid. He went to see his uncle the next evening, but the old man merely said that he had wanted him to witness an important document and, not reaching him, had called in some one else.

This lulled Tom's fears, and he did not know that the wily old man, through parties unknown to him or Bess, had made inquiries which had put him in possession of the situation of affairs in their household. He also by similar indirect means learned that Tom was inclined to take an interest in unprofitable affairs and spent very little of his time at home. But the uncle made no mention to any one of his discoveries. He did a job of thinking over the matter and came to some conclusions that would have caused his nephew to open his eyes had he been aware of the fact.

For awhile after his uncle had sent for him—not to find him—Tom was uneasy about going out. But his uneasiness did not last long. His uncle's manner was the same that it had been, and there was no indication that there had been any unfavorable turn. But Bess, who had been for a long while striving to make ends meet, had been unable to do so, and the family financial affairs were on the ragged edge. Bess had been ill on several occasions, and a doctor's bill to a considerable amount had accumulated.

Perhaps if they had applied to Mr Buddington he might have helped them out. Perhaps he might have told them that if they had lived within their income they would have provided for the doctor's bills as they occurred. But they did not dare inform the old man of their condition. He was getting feeble and might drop off any day. If they could worry along till he had passed away they could pay all their bills a hundred times over. So they concluded to endure the situation. But Tom as his uncle's feebleness increased rather increased than diminished his personal expenditures, banking on his soon possessing a fortune.

When Mr. Buddington passed from earth he did so without warning. He died so suddenly that his nephew did not have time to reach him to bid him goodby and receive his blessing. When he reached the house where the rich man lay he received something that he did not appreciate as he would have appreciated a blessing. The housekeeper handed him a note written by the deceased shortly before his death, which read as follows:

My Dear Nephew—I have led you to believe that at my death you would inherit what I have been a lifetime in accumulating. During the last few years I have concluded that you are not a safe person to be intrusted with a fortune. I have therefore decided to place my estate in other hands. Don't feel hard toward me for this. I have always been very fond of you and am fond of you still. Goodby. Your affectionate UNCLE.

Tom staggered under the blow. His wife, who was with him and read the letter over his shoulder, took him in her arms. She was too disappointed to speak encouragingly to him, but spoke no word of reproach. Sadly they left the house, the wife looking the future in the face resolutely, the husband limp as a cloth.

When the will was opened Tom and his wife were present more out of curiosity than anything else, though they thought that some memento might be left them. The will was very short, reading as follows:

"I give and bequeath to Elizabeth Buddington, wife of my nephew, Thomas R. Buddington, all my property, real and personal."

Tom looked at Bess, and Bess looked at Tom. Then the woman took the man's hand in hers, and what she felt was indicated by a pressure.

It was evident that Mr. Buddington had noted the difference between the two—that the wife was fitted to dispense an income and that the husband was not. During the years that they enjoyed their inheritance Bess conscientiously carried out the intent of the will and resisted all attempts of her husband to induce her to turn the fortune over to him or to permit him to have anything to say in its management or the disposition of the income.

But she was very liberal with him, not grudging him any reasonable sum, making sure, however, that it was spent for a legitimate purpose.

GOT A FREE BATH

He Didn't Really Need It, but That Made No Difference.

JUST SIMPLY HAD TO TAKE IT.

A Visit to a Hospital That Resulted In a Surprise to the Caller and Forced a Conscientious Orderly to Do His Duty as He Saw It.

A very much subdued officer from one of the Italian ships in the port left a Brooklyn hospital the other day after an experience like that of the man who was forced to take mustard with his boiled beef. The officer had been coerced into taking a bath in the hospital, albeit he did not need one any more than his vessel had need of a whiffletree—merely a blunder on the part of an officious but conscientious orderly. The hardy mariner could speak very little English, and that was partly the cause of the trouble.

The hospital in question has dealings with the merchant marine, and many sailors who come into port sick are sent to the institution for medical treatment. It chanced that one of the men from this vessel had been taken to the hospital and had a private room on one of the upper floors. The victim of the bath called to see him and made application in his halting English at the office of the institution. He was able to explain sufficiently that he had called to have a talk with his shipmate, and the superintendent gave him a slip to hand to the nurse, with directions to go to the floor where his comrade was temporarily interned. He went up in the elevator without mishap and encountered a dainty little nurse, to whom in his crude English he explained matters.

She motioned to him to take a seat on a bench that stood along the wall in the hall, and he just understood enough of her talk to know that he would have to wait. He was there about five minutes when the orderly came along.

Now, the bench occupied by the sailor was a bench for new patients. A new patient must submit to a bath unless there are orders to the contrary, and, although this particular ship's officer was as tidy and clean as could be, there were no contrary orders in his case. The orderly naturally supposed that the man on the bench was waiting for his tub and proceeded to get it ready for him. The hospital employee filled the bathtub and led the guest into the room. The water was hot.

"Now take your bath," said the orderly.

The sailor didn't want a bath and shook his head in a vigorous negative.

"See here, my good man," proceeded his volunteer valet, "you'll have to take it, and that's all there is about it. It is a rule of the hospital, and you can't stay here unless you jump into that tub."

With a delicacy that is not often met with in men orderlies in city hospitals, this particular official supposed that the new patient might be a bit modest about his tubbing and left him in the bathroom. But he took the precaution to lock him up.

Immediately after the orderly went a bundle of towels and soap came flying out over the transom. The hospital man threw them back again. The man inside just as promptly returned them flying back. A third time the towels and soap were thrown out, and this made the orderly angry. He went in and had it out with the recalcitrant.

"You've just got to take that bath, my man, and that is all there is about it. If you don't I'll bathe you myself."

The man evidently understood that there was no escape and, probably supposing that it was a custom of the hospital to bathe all visitors, proceeded to disrobe and dutifully jumped in. The orderly was satisfied and went about his other duties.

The man's visit to the hospital had been a long one, and the superintendent called up on the house telephone to find out what had become of him. The trim little nurse was asked to explain. She did not know where he had gone.

"I left him sitting on the bench here," she said, "and when I looked for him again he had disappeared."

Nobody had seen him go out. The elevator man was questioned, and he could not tell what had become of him. The mystery deepened until the orderly was found.

"Are you looking for the man on the bench?" he asked. "He's having a bath. He would not take it at first, and I just locked him in."

The involuntary bather was released, and many apologies were offered to him. He was permitted to visit his friend, and, sick as the patient was, he had a hearty laugh over his friend's odd experience. And the sailor in his very best English, which the trim little nurse untidily declared to be "lingo," said that after he had his bath he felt better and added that he forgave everybody, even the orderly.—Brooklyn Eagle.

"Asia Minor" a Puzzle.

"Asia Minor" is a geographical term of vague extension. It would puzzle any one to say exactly where it leaves off. The name dates only from the fifth century (A. D.), when Orosius used it evidently as a novelty. The Roman empire knew no Asia Minor. Indeed, the Roman province of "Asia" was actually smaller than this lesser Asia. The alternative name Anatolia (land of the sunrise or east), which has found favor with the Turks, is equally indeterminate.—London Spectator.

When you find yourself trusting to luck you need a new credit man.—Youth's Companion.

Which Do You Prefer?

It is important for reasons of health and practical economy for every housekeeper to ask herself this question:

"Do I prefer a pure baking powder like Royal, made of cream of tartar derived from grapes, or am I willing to use a baking powder made of alum or phosphate, both derived from mineral sources?"

The names of the ingredients printed on the label show whether the kind you are now using or any brand, new or old, that may be offered is a genuine cream of tartar powder, or merely a phosphate or alum compound.

Royal Baking Powder contains no alum nor phosphate.

Miss Mabel Loder Dead.

Miss Mabel E. Loder, of Howard, died on Saturday of last week at the Lock Haven hospital following an operation performed a short time previously. The deceased was a daughter of J. Z. and Susan E. Loder and was born at Howard February 2d, 1893, making her age at the time of death 23 years, 3 months and 17 days. She was a most estimable young lady and her untimely death is sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends. She was an active, earnest member of the Howard Evangelical church and also of the P. O. of A. Surviving are her parents and a sister, Mrs. Ray Allison, of Nittany Valley. Funeral services were held Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, from the Evangelical church, Rev. J. S. Bingman officiating. Interment was made at Howard.

"Birth of a Nation"

David W. Griffith's epoch making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," following its record-breaking runs in New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles, will be seen in one of its original productions at Garman Opera House May 31st and June 1st matinee and night. This work, partly from the nature of the new art, partly from the opposition aroused, has excited keener curiosity than any other offering of the current season. "The Birth of a Nation" tells by film and music the story of nation re-born through the storm and stress of internecine strife.

Waite—Reese.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the United Brethren parsonage in Bellefonte Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock, the contracting parties being Miss Rhoda M. Reese, of Port Matilda, and G. Ralph Waite, of Altoona. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. T. Hugh MacLeod. The bride is the accomplished daughter of Mrs Christian Reese, of Port Matilda. The groom is the youngest son of W. W. Waite, of Half-moon valley. The pretty ring ceremoney was used. After receiving congratulations of friends the newly married couple departed on a tour to eastern cities. They will reside at Juniata.

Cummings—Fetzer.

Friday afternoon, May 12, at the Reformed parsonage in Bellefonte, Mr. Robert C. Cummings and Miss Elizabeth J. Fetzer, both of Howard, were married by the Rev. Dr. A. W. Schmidt. The bridal party was attended by Mr. John J. McGovern, Jr., and Miss Inez M. Bartley, both of Bellefonte. The best wishes of a host of friends are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Cummings. For the present they will make their home at Howard, where Mr. Cummings is in the employ of the Penna. R. R.

BIRDS HIGH IN THE AIR.

Out of Human Sight They Can Hear Calls From the Earth.

On Sept. 30, 1894, an astronomer at Shere, England, was studying the sun through a telescope. Every few seconds during the ten minutes he watched a bird was seen to pass slowly through his field, flying in a southerly direction, but with the naked eye not a bird could be seen.

Our ears really tell us more than our unaided eyes about the day fliers which are traveling far up in the sky. With nothing to turn them from their course sound waves carry surprising distances either up from the earth or down to it.

Balloonists tell us how clearly they can hear voices of people who are scarcely visible to them. So we may hear the notes of passing birds which are traveling at too great a height to be seen. The mellow whistles of certain snipe and plover tell us that they are passing along the birds' air line when it is impossible for us to see them. But if we answer we may in time see a black speck in the sky which responds to our call and finally circles close overhead.

On one occasion in Central park, New York city, I heard the flutelike call of a yellow leg snipe which was migrating high over the city. Perhaps he was calling to some companion in the sky. Certainly there was nothing on the earth to attract him. But, putting my fingers to my lips, I whistled a loud imitation of his notes. Quickly he answered. I whistled again and soon could see a black dot circling high above me. Larger and larger it grew, louder and more frequent became his cry, and within a minute, much to the surprise of passersby, the bird was flying anxiously back and forth just over my head. But, unable to find the bird which had called to him, he soon mounted high in the air and continued his journey.—Frank M. Chapman in St Nicholas.

THE PASS TO THE NORTH.

El Paso Was Given Its Name In 1598 by Juan de Onate.

As you near El Paso you catch a glimpse at Ysleta of the venerable church, now hopelessly "restored," that was built away back in 1682 after the Pueblo uprising. Does this sound like a remote date in American history? One is constantly surprised down here by the antiquity of the settlements.

El Paso is certainly no exception to the rule, for it was given its name in 1598 by Juan de Onate, one of the earliest explorers of New Mexico, who, having forded the Rio Grande at this point, called it El Paso del Norte—the pass to the north. Fifty years later the old church and mission at Juarez were built. But from that time until the Mexican war period the site of El Paso itself remained a ranch belonging to the Ponce de Leon family. After the American occupation it became a terminal point on the old overland trail from St. Louis to San Francisco, and the rumbling stagecoaches brought life and glitter to the saloons and gambling joints of the Calle El Paso.

The last half century has again vastly changed all this, and the border town has been completely submerged in the steady march of modern improvement.

Pioneer Plaza remains the center of the city's activities, to be sure, but upon it, instead of humble adobe homes and tawdry shops front two great hotels, several large department stores which display the very latest fashions and the "largest all concrete building in the world."—Ernest Peixotto in Scribner's Magazine.

A Ruin on the Rhine.

Said to be the first place in Germany where cannon were mounted, the tower of Ehrenfels, built in 1210 by Philip von Bolander, governor of Rheingau, has been a dismantled ruin since 1689. It is one of the romantic features of the Rhine near Bingen, with Bishop Hatto's "mouse tower" opposite.

"I thought it was an ordinary cabaret feature. I couldn't understand what the waitress was yelling. I thought she was singing."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

INSECT MARVELS.

These Tireless Creatures Are Built For the Strenuous Life.

Many interesting facts, the result of long study, are given by Mr. Harold Bastin, an eminent entomologist, in his book, "Insects, Their Life Histories and Habits."

"Contrary to popular belief, spiders are not insects. Insects have six legs, neither more nor less, and another peculiarity of the insect is that it has wings—sometimes two, more often four. Spiders have eight legs and no wings; therefore spiders are not insects.

"Insects have no backbones and no skeletons, but skins with a hard, durable surface called chitin, which makes up a light shell of armor that forms the outside of the body, to the inside of which the muscles are attached. Insects do not breathe through their mouths, but through holes in the bodies called spiracles. Insects have neither veins nor arteries; the blood is pumped directly from the chambered heart into the body cavity, where it bathes and nourishes the organs. Insects have wonderful and enviable digestive organs and feed upon and digest almost any substance from which nourishment may be extracted.

"Because of the way they are built, insects are particularly fitted for the strenuous life, and a tired insect is a thing unknown. They are always busy traveling, buzzing, biting or seeking some work to do."

SECRET OF A FLOWER.

How Did the Trumpet Vine Discover the Bared Stump?

If some one advanced the theory that this plant had some unknown power of reasoning you would probably reply that "plants can't reason because they have no mind." You may change your opinion after you hear this story, related by Royal Dixon, who writes entertainingly about how near like human beings in their actions plants are.

The story is about a trumpet vine, the favorite of many an old fashioned garden. About twenty feet from where it grew was an old pine stump with the bark on. One day a fire was built about the foot of the stump, and the bark was burned off.

Immediately the trumpet vine sent forth a long trailer across the garden to the stump. It raised the tendrils, felt the smooth surface of the stump and started to climb. Before long the whole blackened surface was hidden beneath the leaves and blossoms of the new vine.

With the rough bark on the stump provided no surface for the clinging tendrils of the vine. After the fire destroyed the bark the vine found a place to climb.

How did the plant know that the fire had prepared the stump? We don't know. Ask the flower.—Philadelphia North American.

Cellini's Quick Cure.

Benvenuto Cellini when about to cast his famous statue of Perseus, now in the Loggia del Lanzi at Florence, was taken with a sudden fever. In the midst of his suffering one of his workmen rushed into his sick chamber and exclaimed, "Oh, Benvenuto, your statue is spoiled, and there is no hope whatever of saving it!" Cellini said that when he heard this he gave a howl and leaped from his bed. Dressing hastily, he rushed to his furnace and found his metal "caked." He ordered dry oak wood and fired the furnace fiercely, working in a rain that was falling, stirred the channels and saved his metal. He continues the story thus: "After all was over I turned to a plate of salad on a bench there and ate with a hearty appetite and drank together with the whole crew. Afterward I retired to my bed, healthy and happy, for it was two hours before morning, and slept as sweetly as if I had never felt a touch of illness."

An Excess of Nerve.

"I like to see a young man energetic and able to push himself," said the old banker sadly. "But when he borrowed the money from me to buy an automobile in which to elope with my daughter it was carrying things a little too far."

OLD BILL GOT THE BIRDS

Truthful Person Comes to the Front With Story of Really Remarkable Shooting.

"Speaking of good shots," said Truthful, "the best shot I ever saw was Bill Slivers, who used to hunt out here in the early days. Bill learned the gunmaker's trade when he was young and I want to say that he was some mechanic when it came to that.

"He invented a gun which he made himself that beat any of these here modern guns for long distance and accuracy. He might have made a fortune out of it if he had put it on the market, but Bill just naturally didn't care for money and just made one gun and quit at that.

"One day there was a flock of pigeons flying across the country. In those early days there was a terrible lot of wild pigeons. There ain't any more of them now, but people who are able to recollect back 40 years remember when there were millions and millions of them. This flock was flying so high that they weren't visible to the naked eye, but Bill used long-distance field glasses when he shot with that gun. The fellers in the camp said they would like to have a mess of birds and Bill said he would just go out and shoot a dozen or so.

"As I said, this flock was flying so high that the birds weren't visible to the naked eye and when Bill said he would shoot a dozen or so the cook gave a derisive laugh and said, 'You doggoned fool, there ain't no pigeons within a thousand miles of here.'

"Bill didn't say nothing in reply—just took his gun and field glasses and began shootin' in the air. The cook looked at him a minute and then said to the other fellers, 'Ol' Bill has sure been fillin' up on loco weed and gone plumb crazy. Just look at the old fool out there shootin' holes in the air.'

"Bill paid no attention to the remarks of the cook—went right along shootin' until he had fired 12 shots—then he came in and put up his gun in the corner of the shack. That was just about seven o'clock in the morning. At a quarter past eleven the birds began to fall. There was 12 of 'em and every one of 'em shot through the head. They was so high when they was hit that it took 'em just four hours to hit the earth.

"All the cook said when he picked up the birds was, 'Ol' Bill wasn't so durned crazy after all.'"—Farmers' Mail and Breeze.

Law's "Reasonable Doubt."

Ordinarily everybody knows what "reasonable doubt" means, and what the law means when it says that the prisoner cannot be convicted if the jury has a reasonable doubt of his innocence. But when the judge gives a dozen instructions on reasonable doubt, it is clear that nobody could understand what is meant.

St. Augustine, when questioned about a doctrine of the church, said:

"If you ask me, I don't know; but if you don't ask me, I know very well."

The result is, in any important case, that the confused jury goes out to find a verdict, taking with them an armful of instructions, Melville Davisson Post writes in Saturday Evening Post. Half of these instructions will tell them that if they believe certain things, they must find the prisoner guilty and the other half will tell them that if they believe other things they must acquit the prisoner, and sometimes the instructions will be so drawn that, upon the statement of the same beliefs one instruction tells them to acquit the prisoner and the other tells them to convict him. So they do not know what to do, and probably toss up a penny on the verdict.

Passed Up Hot Coffee.

It was bitterly cold. The woman, standing in her warm kitchen, where the thermometer registered 75, and looking out at the man putting a load of coal into her cellar, shivered. She noticed how red his face had grown from the incessant slapping of the wind; she saw he wore no overcoat, that his throat was not bundled about as it should be, that his gloves were poor, cheap affairs. Pity for the man filled her heart and when he had finished shoveling in the last of the coal she opened the door and spoke to him.

"You must be very cold. Don't you want to step inside by the kitchen fire and get warm, and let me get you something hot? I will give you a cup of steaming hot coffee."

"Lady," replied the coal man, "if you have any good whisky I'll come in for a swaller or two, but I don't care nothin' about coffee—coffee 's no good for a feller when he's as cold as I am."

And the kind-hearted lady had to let him go away, suffering.

His Farm Is Tramps' Haven.

Henry Heft, a good-natured farmer of near Adamstown, gave lodging to 595 tramps during the past year. Every hobo calling at his country place is given a comfortable place to sleep, and meals. In return the guests always do chores about the farm. In all his experience, Heft has never had any trouble with those whom he sheltered. His record shows the January guests numbered 34; February, 32; March, 53; April, 53; May, 64; June, 71; July, 37; August, 70; September, 32; October, 18; November, 38; and December, 33.—Reading (Pa.) ROMANTIC STORY OF WHEAT

World Being Fed on Grain Grown on Land That Was Comparatively Recently a Waste.

A direct result of the present war, more pleasant to contemplate than the stories of carnage, is the stimulus it has given to the chief industry of the huge central basin of North America. Winnipeg is the geographical center of the continent, and from it in every direction in Canada and far down into the United States spread the rolling miles of what is undoubtedly the greatest wheat region in the world.

The figures presented by the American and Canadian governments for the year just closed tell a romantic story. In the area of the Canadian Northwest and of the American border states 600,000,000 bushels of the highest grade wheat known to the markets was grown, and yet within the memory of men not yet old every acre of it was given over to the Indian and the buffalo.

Long after our Civil war a British traveler wrote an exceedingly interesting book called "The Great Lone Land," describing his struggles with blizzards and starvation in what is now the wheat empire. He did not think much of it as a country for settlers; but time has quickly shown how much he was mistaken, just as it showed in a few years de Tocqueville's great error when he predicted that our western advance would break against the Rocky mountains, or Macaulay's miscalculation when he asserted that we would cease to grow much as soon as all our good free land was taken up.

There are many impressive chapters in the story of the continent, but there is none more picturesque than the one which is being made in our day by a grain of wheat.

Children Interest King.

The king of Spain has become interested in juvenile courts and has instructed the minister of justice to draw up and submit to parliament a bill creating children's courts in various parts of Spain. The plan is to have a presiding judge, who will have jurisdiction over children under fifteen years old. It will have authority in cases of vagrancy and delinquency, and where the parents are shown to be irresponsible they may be deprived of their guardianship.

The courts, according to the king's intention, will be modeled on similar institutions in England. During his visits to London, and before the war Alfonso and his queen went to London at least once a year, the king frequently visited the various courts and took an especial interest in the juvenile one.

New Rifts on Mars.

Astronomers at the Lowell observatory, Flagstaff, Ariz., have discovered a number of canaliform rifts in the north polar cap of Mars. These rifts, it has been suggested, show the effect of the vegetation coming through the snow. The course of the most conspicuous of the openings is said to coincide closely with that of the known canal, Cadmus.

Indoor Constitutional.

Augustus O. Stanley, Kentucky's new governor, who has mounted the water wagon, announced recently that during his four-year term not a drop of intoxicating drink will be allowed in the state house.

"The campaign that I propose to wage against alcohol," said Governor Stanley, "is to be a thorough and honest campaign. There is too much hypocrisy among drinkers. Here is a typical instance:

"I sat one evening on a trolley car beside two women who were returning together from an afternoon's shopping tour.

"'My husband goes out every evening for a little constitutional,' one of the women said. Then she inquired: 'Does yours?'

"'No,' replied the other. 'No; my husband always keeps it in the house.'"—Washington Star.

His Idea of It.

"Do you subscribe to the theory that honesty is the best policy?" asked the casual conversationalist.

"Why, sure," answered his fellow passenger on a trolley car. "Why do you ask?"

"I noticed that you gave the conductor a plugged nickel and he handed it back to you."

"Ahem! Well, I try to subjugate my finer feelings when dealing with a soulless corporation."

No Need of a "Front."

"That shabby looking old fellow is worth several millions."

"You surprise me. Why doesn't he wear better clothes?"

"Oh, he doesn't have to borrow any money. People come to him to borrow it."

Treasurer's Sale of Unseated Land

for non-payment of taxes for the years 1914 and 1915, as well as certain lots of Seated Land. In accordance with the provisions of the Act of Assembly, entitled "An Act directing the mode of selling unseated lands for taxes and other purposes," passed the 13th day of March 1815, and the various supplements thereof, together with the other various Acts of Assembly relating thereto, I, David Chambers, Treasurer of the County of Centre, hereby give notice to all persons concerned, that unless the taxes due and remaining unpaid on the following described tracts or parts of tracts of unseated land, as well as such lots of seated land, situated in said County of Centre, be paid before the day of sale, the whole or such part of each tract of said lands as will pay the taxes and costs chargeable thereon, will be exposed to public sale or outcry, at the Court House in the Borough of Bellafonte, in said county, commencing on the second Monday of June next (the 12th day thereof) and continuing, by adjournment from day to day, until all are sold.

ENORMOUS PAGEANT

Every day when the members of the Carl Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus finish breakfast they begin active preparations for the parade. Well-fed horses and ponies in shining harness and wavering plumes take their places before glittering parade chariots; the sound of music is heard from bands perched hazardously high; clowns, charioteers, jockeys, Roman hippodrome riders, camels from the great desert with native riders and ponderous elephants, some bearing a weight of feminine beauty in Oriental costume, make appearance in a picturesque, kaleidoscopic pageant more than three miles long.

A man on horseback in a deep voice cries the oft-repeated warning: "Look out for your horses; the elephants are coming." Behind him a bevy of pretty women buglers trumpet their clarion-voiced instruments, and then Jeanne d'Arc, in polished armor with clanking curtains of chain-mail. The flush of tan has tinted her ears and cheeks. She is a young woman, adopted by a wealthy aunt in New Haven, Conn., who sent her to Europe to keep her from entering circus life. Her sudden return and her romantic marriage with a clown caused daily papers all over the country to devote considerable space to the incident.

Through densely crowded streets the pageant measures its gaudy passage. The husky youth who sits high up on a wagon representing the German empire, and he himself the Kaiser, is in reality only a candy butcher. With his royal helmet of shining brass and his purple and gold jacket he impersonates the mighty man who rules over a great domain. In the afternoon his regal attire will give way to a white jacket, and he will stop being king long enough to peddle lemonade and peanuts. Cage after cage and wagon after wagon filled with rare and costly animals pass in a fantastic panorama. The calliope shrieks madly, and behind it half a hundred boys, playing "hookey" from school, trail tirelessly. The Carl Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus will come to Bellefonte, Wednesday May 31, for performances at 2 and 8 p. m. The parade is at 10 o'clock.

SPIDERS AS FACTORY HANDS.

Spinning the Delicate Threads For Use In Telescopes.

Spiders are probably the most indispensable workmen in one of the largest English surveying instrument factories. It is their duty to spin the delicate thread which is used for the cross hairs to mark the exact center of the object lens in the surveyor's telescope.

Spider web is the only suitable material yet discovered for the cross hairs of surveying instruments. Almost invisible as this fiber is to the naked eye, it is brought up in the powerful lenses of the telescope to the size of a man's thumb, so that all defects, if there happened to be any, would be magnified to such a degree that the web would be useless.

Human hair has been tried, but when magnified it has the apparent dimensions of a rough hewn lamp post. Moreover, human hair is transparent, and cross hairs must be opaque.

The spiders produce during a two months' spinning season thousands of yards of web, which is wound upon metal frames and stored away until needed.

A spider "at work" dangles in the air by its invisible thread, the upper end being attached to a metal wire frame whirled in the hands of a girl. The girl first places the spider on her hand until the protruding end of the thread has become attached. When the spider attempts to leap to the ground this end is quickly attached to the center of the whirling frame, and as the spider pays out thread this line is wrapped around the frame. Several hundred feet of thread can be removed from a spider at one time.

The spiders are kept in a large room under the supervision of three girls and a forewoman. When not spinning the little workmen are placed in a large wooden cage. Flies are the chief article of diet.

During the winter months the spider colony usually dies, so that an entirely new corps of workmen must be recruited. Not every spider will do—only large, fat fellows that spin a tough round thread are suitable.

Singularly enough, the girls who have charge of the spiders in this English factory are not in the least afraid of them or their bites. On the contrary, they regard them as pets, are able to tell them apart and to call them by nicknames which humorously describe their appearance or their peculiar habits of work.—New York American.

The Exclusive X Club.

One of the most exclusive of clubs was the X, whose last surviving member was Lord Avebury. It was founded by a little coterie of literary scientists, including Sir Joseph Hooker and Herbert Spencer, and, though intended to comprise ten members, never got beyond nine, because no tenth was found who came up to the two requirements of mental caliber and intimacy with the other nine. Many names for the club were suggested and rejected before a member's wife proposed terming it after the unknown quantity X.—London Opinion.

The Type Used in One Year to Publish Endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills.

Of the many kidney remedies on the market today, none other is recommended like Doan's Kidney Pills. Forty thousand benefited people gladly testify in the newspapers of their own towns. Forty-five hundred American newspapers publish this home proof of Doan's merit. The type used in one year to tell this wonderful story would make a solid column of metal twice as high as the world's highest mountain. Placed end to end the lines of type would reach from New York to Chicago. These miles of good words told by 40,000 tongues sound glad tidings to any Bellefonte sufferer who wants relief from kidney and bladder ills. Here's a Bellefonte case. Don't experiment. Use the remedy endorsed by people you know.

Fred Scott, 247 E. Lamb St., Bellefonte, says: "I have to drive quite a bit over rough roads and the jolting had a bad effect on my kidneys. The trouble started with pains across the small of my back and if I stooped, I could hardly straighten without sharp pains across my loins. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me by friends and I got a box at Green's Pharmacy Co. They brought me relief from the first. One box made a cure and I have not had the slightest backache since."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Scott had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

MARKING THE MAN

Origin of Surnames In the Good Old Days of Long Ago.

MANY SOURCES OF SUPPLY.

When Trades and Callings Were Exhausted Then Places and Events or Objects and Personal Characteristics Were Pressed Into Service.

It cannot but be admitted that considerable food for thoughtful reflection is offered in the study of the origination of names. It was all very well when the world was young; but, as a writer says, "As the population increased and communication became possible and easier the supply of single names was not equal to the demand, and people began to get individuals bearing the same name mixed. It was at this time that the surname was thought of and adopted, so that families might be distinguished one from the other."

Trades and callings are in this day represented in the names of Baker, Carver, Shoemaker, Tyler, Chandler, Mason, Cutler, Carter, Saddler, Slater, Butcher, Draper, Thatcher, Fletcher, Hooper, Cheeseman, Turner, Joiner, Cooper, Glider, Mercer, Skinner, Coleman, Sawyer, Tanner, Spicer, Cook, Tutor, Miner, Driver, Weaver, Gardner, Archer, Merchant, Porter, Wainwright, Taylor, Shepherd, Glover and ever so many others.

Says Cliffard Howard, who has devoted himself to this pleasant study:

"Such names as Hall, Stair, Garret, Kitchin and Chambers also record the occupations of our forefathers, who in these cases were engaged in the households of the nobility and had charge of such apartments as the names indicate. Others held higher offices, and from them we have the surnames Page, Butler, Procter, Forester, Steward, Baily, Fowler, and Woodward and Hayward, the keepers, respectively, of the forest and the cattle."

In other localities it was usual to point out an individual by the place of his birth or residence, a custom which resulted in the adoption of such surnames as French, Scott, Welsh, English, Dan, Burgoyne, Cornish and Cornwallis, Kent, York, Chichester, Lincoln, Wells, Washington, Putnam, Hurst, Buchanan, Preston and Bancroft. A great many of this sort were originally the names of baronial estates, which names the barons adopted as surnames.

Those who were not of such high estate were forced to content themselves with humbler titles. Thus John, who lived by the brook, became John Brook, and David, who lived by a giant oak, was called David Tree.

Richard, who lived at the end of town, became Richard Townsend, while his brother, who lived under the brow of a hill, became known as Peter Underwood. Those who lived near the water took the name of Atwater.

At the time family names began to be used the shops of the merchants were not numbered as they are now, but were known by their signs, which were suspended at the front doors and bore pictures of all sorts of animals, vegetables, birds, flowers, fishes and insects. It was customary to speak of an innkeeper, then, as John of the Bear, or Dick of the Swan, and, as may be readily understood, these names were soon converted into Bear, Hogg, Hart, Bull, Fox, Wolf, Colt, Hare, Beaver, Lyon, Swan, Peacock, Heron, Dove, Partridge, Cock, Finch, Hawk, Crane and Drake, as well as Burt, Chubb, Haddock, Herring, Pike, Perch and others. From vegetables, trees, fruits and flowers we have Bean, Broome, Clover, Birch, Ash, Hawthorne, Hazel, Peach, Flower, Nettle, Vine, Plant, Budd, Branch and Root, besides dozens more.

The shop signs bore other devices, and from these we have such names as Bell, Hammer, Coates, Mantell, Jewel, Potts, Pipes and others.

A great many nicknames remained fixed as family names, the most important being those which referred to the color of hair or complexion, and from these come such well known names as Brown, Black, Gray, White, Reed (red), Blount (fair). Others were given for some personal attainment or characteristic, such as Armstrong, Mitchell (great), Singer, Whistler, Fatwell, Swindells, Strong, Weak, Small, Osgood (well built), Longfellow, Crookshanks, Longman, Whitehead, Broadhead, Swift, Sober, Noble, Hardy, Doolittle, Goodman, Darling, Long, Short, Bachelor, Savage, Wise, Sweet, Moody and others.

To these might be added King, Queen, Pope, Bishop, Knight, Prior, Abbot, Squire, Earl, Duke, Baron, Lord, Prince and others which were originally given to individuals because of their bearing the titles or because of services they may have rendered them.

There are many more which do not come under any particular heading, but owe their origin to some event which the names appropriately indicate—Joy, Bliss, Morrow, Winter, March, May, Weeks and so on.—Exchange.

EDITING SHAKESPEARE.

Nicholas Rowe, Poet Laureate, Was the First to Attempt It.

The first folio was printed partly from the earlier quartos and, partly from manuscript copies in the hands of players. It did not have the careful editing that so important a work should have had, but it preserved from destruction a number of the plays that had not appeared in quarto form.

Nicholas Rowe, poet laureate and dramatist, in his edition of 1709 made the first attempt to edit Shakespeare in the modern sense. He modernized spelling, punctuation and grammar, added lists of dramatis personæ and divided the acts and scenes properly. Since his time editors have been busily engaged in corrections and emendations.

Alexander Pope, the second editor, issued his Shakespeare in 1723, and this was followed in 1733 by Lewis Theobald's edition, whose bitter attack upon Pope in "Shakespeare Restored" led to the latter's making Theobald the dull and pedantic hero of his "Dunciad." The handsome edition by Sir Thomas Hanmer appeared in 1744 and William Warburton's in 1747. Dr. Samuel Johnson's edition was published in 1765. Then came Edward Capell's in 1767-68, George Steevens' in 1773, Joseph Rann's in 1786-94 and Edward Malone's in 1790.—New York Times.

COUNCIL IN SESSION.

Orders Issued for Thorough Cleaning in Rear of Numerous Buildings.

Bellefonte borough Council at its regular meeting Monday night took positive action in the matter of cleaning alleys in the rear of a number of buildings in the central part of town. Complaint on this score has been filed with Council on numerous occasions. In order to secure results without further delay Council referred the matter to the Street Committee and the Board of Health, with power to act.

There was considerable discussion in regard to exacting a charge for water furnished the Y. M. C. A. and the Bellefonte Academy. One proposition submitted by Councilmen was that the Academy be given free 1,000,000 gallons per year and the Y. M. C. A. 2,000,000 gallons. This suggestion brought up the fact that an existing ordinance provides free water for filling the Y. M. C. A. swimming pool a stated number of times each week. President Walker proposed installing a meter on the swimming pool and another on shower baths, etc. to determine how much was used by each. It was also suggested that all water meters in the borough be sealed, but this, it was pointed out, could be done only by incurring considerable expense. No definite action on the general subject was taken.

The Fire and Police Committee reported the receipt of $20 in fines from Burgess Blanchard. The placing of 800 feet of sewer pipes on Lamb Street also was reported.

Borough Solicitor Mitchell submitted to Council a draft of the proposed agreement between the borough and the State-Centre-Electric Co. for pumping water. The agreement was referred to the solicitor and the special committee for minor changes, after which it will be submitted to the State-Centre-Electric Co. for approval and report at the next meeting of Council.

Mrs. Laura F. Bechdel Dead.

Mrs. Laura Foresman Bechdel, well known and highly esteemed resident of Blanchard, died at her late home at that place at 10 o'clock last Sunday night, her death resulting from a stroke of apoplexy suffered five days previously. From the time she was taken ill while attending a religious service her condition showed no improvement and it was realized that the end was near at hand. The deceased was aged about 58 years and was a daughter of the late Henry Foresman. For some years she had engaged in teaching school, meeting with gratifying success and endearing herself to a wide circle of friends at various places in Centre County. She was an active, zealous member and a worker in the Baptist church. She was a writer of considerable ability and frequently contributed items of news from Blanchard for "The Republican." Surviving is one son, Russell Bechdel, of Pittsburgh, and two sisters, Mrs. Sadie Rothrock, at home, and Mrs. James Shaw, of Coffeyville, Kansas, also by one brother, John Foresman, of Howard. Funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Baptist church in Blanchard, Rev. George P. Prentice, the pastor, officiating. Interment was made in the Baptist cemetery at Blanchard.

Mrs. Mary M. Stover Dead.

Mrs. Mary Mulhollan Stover died at her late home in Curwensville on Thursday, May 11th, the result of a stroke of apoplexy. She was taken ill but two days previous to her passing away. The deceased was born in Bellefonte June 26th, 1852, the daughter of James Lafayette and Susan Boel Mulhollan. Surviving are her husband and these children: Mrs. A.M. Hebel, of Osceola Mills; James C. Stover, of Curwensville; Charles C. Stover, of Collingwood, New Jersey, and Rebecca, at home. There survive also two brothers and three sisters, as follows: William, of Clearfield; Rudolph, of Altoona; Mrs. W. T. Twitmire and Mrs. C. C. Shuey, of Bellefonte, and Mrs. S. Blair Riling, of Altoona. Funeral services were held from the late home on Saturday, Rev. J. Max Lantz officiating. Interment was made at Curwensville. Mrs. Stover was for many years an active, earnest member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

William H. Lucas Dead.

After suffering for sometime with cancer of the liver, William H. Lucas, of Northwood, passed away Sunday morning at four o'clock. Deceased was born at Milesburg, April 7, 1850, where he grew to young manhood. After removing to Tyrone Mr. Lucas was employed at the West Virginia Pulp and Paper mills and was held in high esteem by his fellow employes. Early in life he united with the Methodist church and had lived according to the teachings of that faith ever since. He is survived by his wife and the following children: Mrs. George Bell, Mrs. R. M. Kidd and Fred B. Lucas, of Salamanca, N. Y.; Mrs. Charles Eidell, of Kane, Pa., and Charles, of Munson, Pa. Private funeral services were held at the late home on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. George M. Glenn, pastor of the First Methodist church. Interment at Tyrone.

the costs of prosecution and further sentence suspended. On Tuesday afternoon, the prosecutors and some witnesses appeared in Court and testified as to what had taken place, but the Court did not change its ruling and left the sentence of the 13th inst. stand.

Commonwealth vs. George B. Morton indicted for desertion and non-support of wife, prosecutrix Elsie E. Morton. The prosecutrix testified that they were married on the 10th of May, 1911, but before this testimony was offered the District Attorney moved the Court for Nol Pros of the second count in the indictment, which was for desertion and non-support of the child. This motion was allowed. Defendant's counsel then moved the Court for the discharge of the defendant on the plea of autrefois convict. The defendant having made arrangements under order of the Court to support and maintain his child. The prosecutrix in further testifying that she was willing to live with her husband if he furnished her a home, which the defendant accepted and the case was withdrawn for final disposition at September sessions in the event that the parties do not carry out the terms of the agreement made in open Court.

Commonwealth vs. Clyde Shutt, prosecutrix Carrie Owens, indicted for betrayal. This case went to trial. Verdict on Wednesday morning of guilty.

W. C. T. U. Prize Essay Contest.

On next Monday afternoon, May 22, at three o'clock, the fourth annual W. C. T. U. prize essay contest will be held in the High School auditorium. One hundred and one essays were written this year by the pupils of the freshman and sophomore classes of the High School. Out of these have been selected thirteen, which will be read by the young writers themselves that afternoon and will be judged by three of our prominent fellow townsmen as to which is the best girl and the best boy contestant.

The Bellefonte Woman's Christian Temperance Union awards five dollars in gold to each as prizes, which will be handed to the winners at Commencement, when all the school prizes are awarded.

The program will be enlivened by music by the High School orchestra, and visitors will be cordially welcomed. All members of the W. C. T. U. are especially urged to be present, as this educational work among the schools is considered by many to be the best and most far-reaching in effect of all the splendid work done by this great organization.
